His training is in demolitions, but he also serves as the group's muscle whenever heads need to be cracked without leaving a body count. Martin started his career as a prizefighter, and through the years he has developed a bar room brawler's equivalent of the Drunken Master martial arts style. Dean's knowledge of gambling, picked up through various jobs in casinos (both legal and illegal) also comes in handy on missions from time to time.

This ability makes Sinatra a master at mission planning.

Dumb Fact: Worked in a munitions factory during WWII.		Marilyn Monroe

Marilyn Monroe (Code Name: Bombshell) uses her good looks and power over men to good effect as a member of the Summit Squadron. While most members of the team were recruited by the government along with Frank, Marilyn's introduction to the team was a bit more complicated. Although the general public would not find about her affairs with the Kennedy brothers for nearly a decade, word of her relationships with two of the most powerful men in America spread through the intelligence community like wildfire. She became a target for enemy agents who hoped to extract information from her and possibly turn her.

The CIA decided that Monroe's substance abuse problem and possible communist sympathies (as evidenced to her marriage to suspected communist Norman Mailer) made her a security risk that needed to be eliminated. The first team sent in to assassinate Norma Jeane botched the job and clued her in that her days were numbered. When the Kennedys refused to get involved, Marilyn turned to the next most powerful man she knew: Frank Sinatra. Frank told the agency that he could use "a broad like that" on his team, and that Marilyn would be more useful alive than dead, especially if everyone believed she was dead. After her "death" in 1962, Marilyn became a member of the Squadron.

Dumb Fact: Nickname: First Brother-In-Law

Peter Lawford (Code Name: The Brit) is the Summit Squadron's front man for many operations due to his natural charm and his mastery of the art of disguise. Born in England, Lawford became an American citizen in 1960. Lawford has a rocky relationship with Frank Sinatra, mainly because of Peter's status as the brother-in-law of John F. Kennedy. Sinatra often tries to use Lawford to get closer to the President (who tries his best to distance himself from Frank because of Sinatra's alleged mob ties), and inevitably blames Lawford when things don't go according to plan. An accident when he was young caused irreparable nerve damage to Lawford's right arm, but he is extremely adapt at hiding the injury.

Sammy Davis, Jr. (Codename: Candyman) is the Summit Squadron's resident chemist, trained in making drugs, poisons, and even explosives out of commonly available chemicals. It was Sammy who convinced Frank to change the group's name from "The Clan" to "The Summit" by pointing that many people associated the label with the KKK. Despite his celebrity status Sammy still deals with racism on a regular basis and is a vocal supporter of the civil rights movement. Davis is a gun enthusiast and one of the best shooters on the team despite the fact that he's missing an eye.
